

Components

AIA Components Presents Design Excellence Award Winners

Chicago Awards Are Online

Nineteen Chicago-area firms were honored by their local component for design excellence. According to AIA Chicago, winning projects in three continents spanned a “range of style, scale, and budget.”

The projects from the 2001 awards program will be on public display at the Chicago Architectural Foundation through December 3 and may be seen at a virtual exhibit on the AIA Chicago Web site, www.aiachicago.org.

Arizona Firms Have Their Day in the Sun

AIA Arizona conferred honor, merit, and citation awards on several member projects. The recipients are:

Honor Awards

- Van Dijk Pace Westlake Architects, in association with Douglas Architecture and Planning, for the Arizona State University Alumni Center, Tempe, Ariz.
- Rick Joy Architect, Ltd., for the Rubio Avenue Studio, Tucson
- Rick Joy Architect, Ltd., for the Tyler Residence, Tubac, Ariz.

Merit Award

- Richard & Bauer Architecture LLC, for the Higher Education Physical Science Building, Glendale Community College, Glendale, Ariz.
- Richard & Bauer Architecture LLC, for the Span House, Phoenix (unbuilt)

Citation Award

- SmithGroup, Phoenix, for the Arizona Western College Career Center, Yuma Ariz.
- Jones Studio, Inc., Phoenix, for the South Mountain Community College Performing Arts Center & Multipurpose Classrooms, Phoenix (unbuilt)
- Line and Space LLC, Tucson, for the The Integrated Shade Seat, Tucson (unbuilt)

Teng & Associates, Chicago, captured a Divine Detail Award from AIA Chicago for its use of “farm vernacular” in a new addition to an 1890s farmstead in Winfield, Ill.

PHOTO BY BARBARA KARANT, KARANT + ASSOCIATES

PHOTO BY GEORGE PAPPAGEORGE, FAIA

Chicago’s Fisher building, by coordinating architect Pappageorge/Haymes Ltd., lobby architect Eifler & Associates, and facade restoration architect Desman Associates received a Special Recognition Award from AIA Chicago.

Chapter Honors Kentucky Architects, Projects

The Kentucky Society of Architects recognized five individuals for their outstanding service to the chapter and to the profession in the Bluegrass State during the component’s annual convention earlier this month.

Lawrence P. Melillo, FAIA, was presented with the C. Julian Oberwarth Award, which recognizes his longstanding commitment to the betterment of the profession and the well-being of architects in Kentucky.

The Citizens Laureate Award was presented to Joseph J. McGowan, PhD, president of Louisville’s Bellarmine University, for his leadership, service, and dedication to better living environments and the values of quality architecture.

The Distinguished Service Award went to Dale R. Curth, AIA, Arrasmith, Judd, Rapp, Inc, Louisville. Honorary membership was bestowed on Peter Morrin, director of the Speed Art Museum in Louisville. The Allied Professional Award went to Jack C. Rhody, retired director of

continued on next page

Components

AIA Components Presents Design Excellence Award Winners

continued from previous page

the Division of Building Codes Enforcement, Kentucky Department of Housing, Buildings, and Construction, Frankfort.

The society also honored four projects for design excellence and presented awards to three Louisville architecture firms. Ted Flato, FAIA, principal of Lake/Flato Architects Inc., San Antonio, chaired the jury. The other two jury members were two of his associates, Craig S. McMahon, AIA, and Robert Harris, AIA.

Honor Award

- Bcatalyst restoration, Louisville, by Bravura Corporation

The excitement of exploration, astronomy, and space is highlighted by the design of the Ghens Science Hall and Rauch Planetarium, by Louis and Henry Group, Louisville.

The YMCA Garage, Metropolitan Offices and Wellness Center Addition by Presnell Group, Louisville, earned a Merit Award from AIA Kentucky

Merit Awards

- YMCA Parking Garage, Metropolitan Offices and Wellness Center Addition, Louisville, by the Presnell Group, with program manager META Associates
- Chelsea Green Condominium, Louisville, by Bravura Corporation

Citation

Gheens Science Hall and Rauch Planetarium, Louisville, by Louis and Henry Group.

-Tracy E Ostroff

AIA Arizona presented Rick Joy Architect, Ltd., Tucson, with an Honor Award for the Tyler Residence. According to the architect, the house enjoys 360-degree vistas, while "lying low and providing relief from the elements."

PHOTO CREDIT: BILL TIMMERMAN

