

Honors and Awards

AIA Minnesota's Honor Award Winners

AIA Minnesota's Honor Awards program has recognized a "lively mix" of projects. They are featured in several issues of Architecture Minnesota, the chapter's magazine. The magazine publication dates follow the firms and award-winning projects, which are listed below. They are in Minneapolis unless otherwise noted.

- Minneapolis Rowing Club Boathouse, by Vincent James Associates Inc. The project was inspired by the arc of oars in the water. Photo above by Mary Ludington, Andrew Dull. (Mar/Apr 2002)
- Pusan Exhibition and Convention Center, Pusan, South Korea, by The Leonard Parker Associates Architects, is South Korea's first convention center. Photo 1 by Myunghwan Cho and JungSik Moon. (Nov/Dec 2001)
- Milwaukee Road Depot Development, is a collaboration of Elness Swenson Graham Architects and Shea Firm. The urban complex features hospitality and entertainment facilities. Photo 2 by Dana Wheelock. (Mar/Apr 2002)

- Moore Residence: Addition & Remodeling of a 1904 Colonial Revival home, by David Heide Design. Photo 3 by Baynard Engelhardt. (Mar/Apr 2002)
- 21320 Renovation, Minneapolis, by CONstruct Architects, Inc., Minnetonka. A remodel and addition transform a suburban lakeside rambler into a contemporary dream. Photo 4 by Peter Bastianeli-Kurze. (May/June 2001)

- F.A.I.R. Arts Middle School, Crystal, Minn., by Hammel Green and Abrahamson, Inc., creates a lively learning environment with whimsical forms. (Mar/Apr 2002)
- Tofte Cabin, Tofte, Minn., by Sarah Nettleton Architects, employs the tenets of sustainable design. Photo 5 by Peter Kurze. (Mar/Apr 2001)
- Riley Hayes Advertising, by The Leonard Parker Associates Architects. In the early 20th century, the building served as a train-engine repair house. (Sept/Oct 2001)
- Service Garage Transformation, by Y + A Architects. Now this edifice is even sweeter than when it was a candy factory. (Mar/Apr 2002).

